The Insurance Technology Cloud Solution Architect is a senior role, and the successful candidate will work in a small group of Architects focuses on the best practices to design and operate the platform of our SaaS solutions and offerings.

The Cloud Solution Architect will report to the Platform and SaaS Principal Architect and will work alongside lead system architects assigned to each of our product families and security architects. The Cloud Solution Architect will be responsible for the design of our common platform components and standards and will work closely with DevSecOps and Site Reliability Engineers to automate our environment deployments and CI/CD pipelines. The successful candidate will also work alongside our Principal Test Engineer and one or more Principal Software Engineers to contribute to delivering best practice across all of our Product Families.

The primary responsibility of the Principal Architect will be this common platform which we think of as composed of core foundational services, environment automation and CI/CD pipelines, and strategic business platform services.

The “core foundational services” are the services required for us to scale cost-effectively to deliver SaaS to thousands of insurance organizations. Examples include but aren’t limited to Identity and Access Management, Container Orchestration, Deployment, Infrastructure as Code, API Management, Service Monitoring and Alerting, and Security.

The environment automation and pipeline architecture will require working with our DevSecOps leaders and architects on the current state and developing a common approach to automate our SSDLC. This will require close collaboration with our Delivery teams and Security Architects.

This is a position designed to facilitate the organization's continued growth in order to accelerate the delivery of new capabilities within existing products and to create further innovative solutions using the latest advances in technology.

It is equally important to us that this role has both a strong foundation in development and cloud solutioning. You will have experience as a System or Solutions Architect or equivalent and have worked as a software engineer working across a wide range of technologies to deliver complex commercial applications. You will also have worked as a Cloud Solution or Enterprise Architect to deliver SaaS architectures and from the ground up. You will have experience in successfully delivering increasingly complex products and solutions whilst working with a large team of stakeholders. You will have a complex products and solutions whilst working with a large team of stakeholders. You will have a successful track record over several years guiding and mentoring multi-disciplinary teams, squads and product families of software professionals including engineers and development managers in terms of systems design and architectural best practice.

A sound technical background is essential to be successful in this role however this opportunity will also encompass some management dimensions such as stakeholder management, team engagement, recruitment, as well as continuous process and efficiency improvement.

Key to the role is having a strategic bias grounded in solid and deep technical understanding, where you will propose and effectively implement key engineering and technology architectures in partnership with a mature Product Management and Engineering Management teams.

This is an excellent opportunity for someone looking to use their knowledge and experience to help architect and build the next generation of software, solve difficult problems, work with a highly skilled teams and across multiple, highly successful, global product families to make a real difference in the way we develop great software.
