Are you a junior level technician looking progress your calibration skills within a leading manufacturer offering progression opportunities and an excellent array of benefits? Do you want a varied and technically interesting role that can offer you extensive development and on/off the job training?

Due to promotion and rapid growth, my client has opened up capacity for a Calibration Technician to join and develop their calibration skills. The company are a manufacturer of high-power semiconductors that supplies into industrial, rail, and renewable energy sectors.

The successful candidate will be responsible for supporting the routine and reactive calibration of a range of equipment, with full training provided to get you up to scratch. External training is also supported, enabling you to strongly develop your skills and gain academic qualifications. From recognition awards, an attractive holiday allowance, and technology schemes, to an early finish Friday, this role provides you with a bundle of added benefits to boost your working experience.

This is a fantastic opportunity for someone with an interest in calibration looking to join a highly regarded company who are offering training, benefits, and a genuine platform for personal development.
