Are you looking for a Senior Compliance Engineer – Electronic Products opportunity in Portsmouth, Hampshire?

If so, a good client of mine has an interesting opportunity for you.

This company designs and manufactures a range of electronic instrumentation products that are used all over the world.

They are looking for a Senior Compliance Engineer – Electronic Products to join their well-established Engineering team. This role would suit an experienced Compliance Engineer/Certification Engineer from the electronics industry. You will be the sole person responsible for Compliance/Certification at this site.

General responsibilities and required skills for the Senior Compliance Engineer – Electronic Products role will include:

Collaborate with product development teams to integrate compliance considerations into product design and manufacturing processes.

Interpret and apply regulatory standards, such as CE marking & Directives.

Manage and maintain documentation related to product compliance, including test reports, technical files, and declarations of conformity.

Coordinate product testing activities with external laboratories and certification agencies to validate compliance with regulatory requirements.

Stay informed about changes in the regulatory landscape and industry standards and communicate implications to relevant stakeholders.

This is a great opportunity to join a successful company that is investing heavily in its products.

They are happy to offer hybrid working with the opportunity to work from home 2 days a week on a normal week.
