Senior Engineering Manager

Senior Engineering Manager for Storage

Job Summary

Equinix Metal, a leading bare metal cloud provider, is looking to grow our software engineering team! If you are an experienced engineering manager looking to take the next step and want to help build out services that will affect how the next generation of infrastructure and hardware is delivered to the world, join our team!

This role can be remote or based in one of our office locations, but the team is fully remote, so it's classified as a remote role regardless.

Responsibilities

In this position, you will be the manager of focused team in charge of ensuring the best storage user experience possible for our customers. You'll help teams navigate the complexities of aligning features with other teams in other parts of the company and making sure our customers can consume them in a seamless and enjoyable way. The team is a software development team, so the usual agile methodologies will be required.

You'll also:

- Live and breath the developer experience with the platform we are responsible for caring and feeding for - our customers are Equinix Metal engineers, and they deserve the best

- Deal with ambiguity and drive to the heart of problems - when developing / managing an internal platform, sometimes you participate in the “what” just as much as the “how”

Recruit, lead, and manage a global and remote team of software engineers

Mentor the individuals on your team and track progress of professional development

Deeply care about technology, your craft and about the success of your team and the company. Have strong intrinsic motivators to help drive self-improvement

Help drive software design and improve our system architecture, making sure components are built in a way that is conducive for rapid development and deployment onto our platform

Excellent communication skills and the ability to navigate ambiguity in requirements by advocating for the best user experience

Be available to support the software your team owns, and be prepared to be on call when things escalate to help the team manage outages

Ability to drive for excellent user experience of cloud APIs, specially those related to storage and drive towards integration

Qualifications:

experience in software engineering management

Bachelor's in Computer Science or Computer Engineering is a nice to have, but not required

Strong organization and time management skills

You enjoy helping people succeed and coaching them to find solutions to difficult technical challenges

You are a natural leader, helping to educate and develop those around you

Experience managing firmware and firmware life cycle projects

Deep understanding of how firmware works and how it interact with higher layers of the stack

Desire to learn about software design/architecture of distributed systems to be able to manage all aspects of firmware lifecycle

Ability to communicate with hardware vendors and reproduce issues for them so they can fix them

Experience developing distributed, scalable, and highly available services with clean and modern APIs

Experience in a modern coding language

Experience with Agile software development practices including Scrum, JIRA, Peer Review, Git and CI/CD

Equinix is an Equal Employment Opportunity and, in the U.S., an Affirmative Action employer.
